The Centre for OSCE Research at the Institute for Peace Research and Security Policy at the University of Hamburg is looking to fill the position of

in-house translator/member of the editorial staff of the “OSCE Yearbook” as of 1 January 2004.

Your task will consist of translating the German articles of the “OSCE Yearbook” into English (occasionally short translations from English into German); editing and proofreading English manuscripts from native and non-native speakers as well as supporting the editorial staff in editing the Yearbook.

You are a native English speaker (BE or AE) and have a university degree in translation studies and/or political science or a comparable degree; you have at least two years of translating experience; you are specialized in political science, particularly in the area of International Relations. You are also familiar with Microsoft Office. You work well both independently and in a team and you are accustomed to fulfilling your tasks carefully even under time pressure.

The position is initially restricted to a one-year contract (with prospects for an extension) remunerated at pay grade IVa BAT. An appointment to this position is dependent on the corresponding approval by the donor.

We look forward to receiving your application including a cover letter, CV, examples of your work and references in English.
